THE STORY OF THE PORCH

In 2009, Southwest Airlines was looking for a snazzy way to introduce itself to New Yorkers. To celebrate the inauguration of Southwest's service at LaGuardia, the airline wanted to roll out the welcome mat for its newest neighbors and bring a little of that legendary Southwest charm to New Yorkers.

That seed of an idea grew into where you are today—the Southwest Porch. In our little Midtown wonderland, Bryant Park provides the spectacular setting, under the trees in the southwest corner of the park, and each season 'wichcraft creates custom sips and snacks just for our Porch visitors. This magical partnership created one of the most popular spots to take a break in Manhattan, where hundreds each day come to enjoy lunch, relax with a book, or simply take a load off in the midst of the busy city.

Southwest not only put down our roots at Bryant Park, but we are growing in the New York market as well. Southwest now offers its legendary service from three local airports—Newark, LaGuardia, and Long Island MacArthur—making it even easier to catch a Southwest flight. So, while you are sitting here daydreaming, and hopefully enjoying a 'wichcraft treat, plan your next getaway—Southwest is just a quick commute away!
